

Enhancing Participant Payments

A new approach with IQVIA's Participant Payments solution

SHAUN WILLIAMS, Senior Director, Clinical Trial Payment Solutions

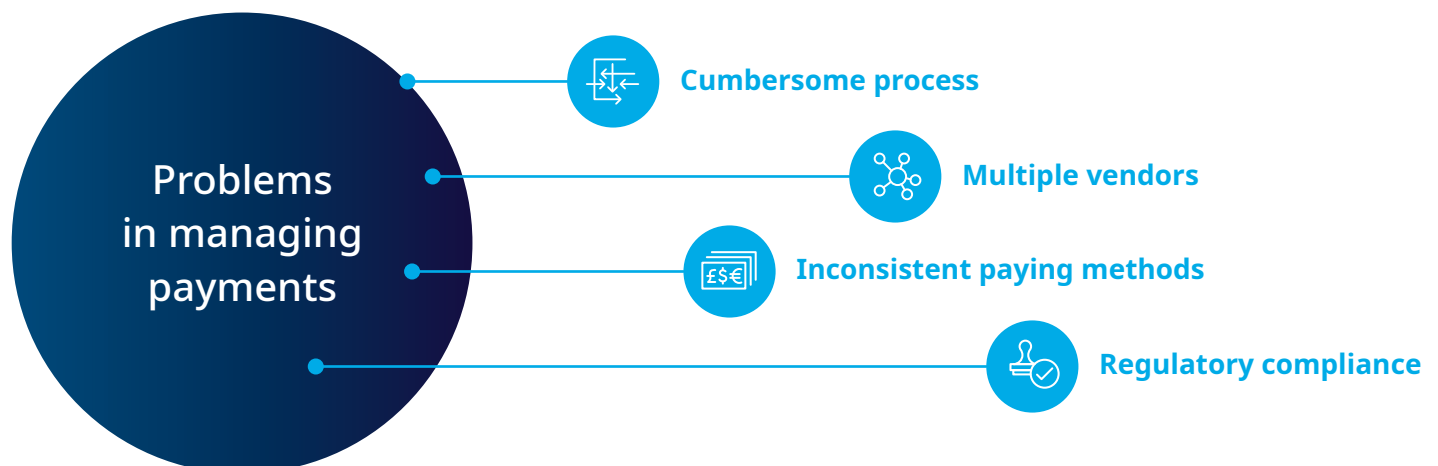

Managing participant payments in clinical trials is a multifaceted challenge that affects participants, sites, and sponsors alike. As clinical trials grow in scale and complexity, the need for an efficient, secure, and globally compliant payment solution becomes increasingly critical. This article explores the complexities of participant payments and introduces a new approach, using IQVIA's Participant Payments solution, which addresses these challenges.

The complex landscape of participant payments

Clinical trials are essential for advancing medical knowledge and bringing new therapies to market. However, managing payments for trial participants can be a significant hurdle. The traditional approach often involves cumbersome processes, multiple vendors, and inconsistent payment methods, leading to delays and dissatisfaction among participants. Moreover, sponsors often face the daunting task of ensuring compliance with various regulatory requirements across various countries.

Participant challenges

For participants, the primary issues revolve around transparency and reliability. Many participants report that compensation is a key motivator for their involvement in clinical trials. However, expectations often do not match reality, leading to frustration and disengagement. Delays in payment processing, limited payment options, and the complexity of reimbursement claims are common pain points.

Site burden

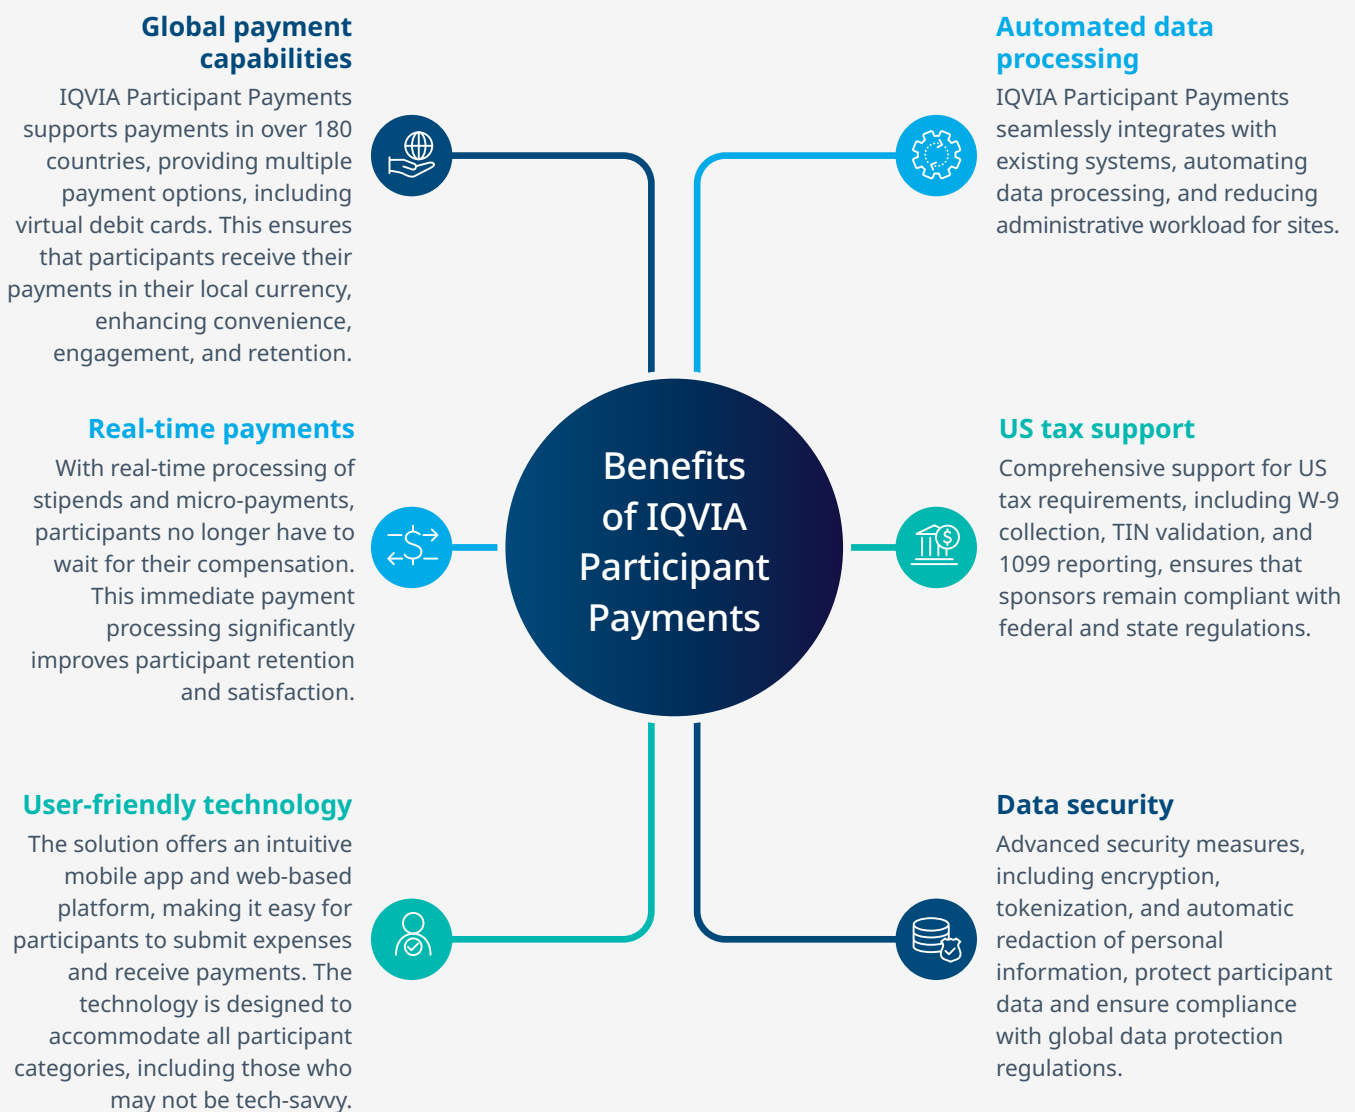

Clinical trial sites bear a substantial administrative burden when it comes to managing participant payments. From tracking payments to ensuring timely disbursement, the process can divert valuable resources from more critical clinical activities. Sites often must navigate multiple systems and vendors, further complicating the payment process.

Sponsor's perspective

For sponsors, the challenge lies in consolidating these disparate processes into a streamlined, efficient system. The goal is to enhance participant retention, ensure regulatory compliance, and gain better visibility into payment data. A robust payment solution is not just a convenience but a strategic imperative to ensure the smooth execution of clinical trials.

Introducing IQVIA's Participant Payments

Recognizing these challenges, IQVIA has developed an innovative solution designed to simplify and streamline the payment process for all stakeholders involved in clinical trials.
